

Tómas Guðbjartsson MD, PhD is a professor of Surgery and an attending Cardiothoracic Surgeon at Landspítali University Hospital in Reykjavik. He did his medical training in Iceland and continued his specialisation General and Cardiothoracic Surgery in Sweden and Boston.

Besides his medical studies Tomas worked as a mountain guide and has since then actively continued to explore the interiors of the country. He has for decades been active in nature conservation in Iceland and regularly writes articles on Icelandic nature in newspapers.